Dave Rickard is the vice president and general superintendent of United Piping Inc., a premier mechanical and general contracting firm that specializes in pipeline facility construction for the oil and gas industry.

Rickard began his career as a certified welder for Modern Constructors in Duluth, Minn. He welded high pressure piping systems for the power plant, oil and gas industry.

Ten years later, Rickard joined Ogstons Inc., a small plumbing and gas distribution company. He worked as a project manager and supervisor and successfully expanded Ogstons Inc. within the oil and gas industry.

Rickard, and two other associates, purchased the company from its owner and changed the name to United Piping Inc. in 1997.

Since its formation as United Piping, the company expanded its customer base and areas of operation throughout the Midwest. It became a leader in pipeline facility construction. The company was purchased by APi Group Inc. in 2009.

Rickard earned a degree from the University of Minnesota, graduated from the welding program at Dunwoody College, and completed a five-year apprenticeship for pipefitting with the United Association of Plumbers and Pipefitters Union. Rickard is married with two children. ⚙
